Kyogen play

Bonsan

A man comes to steal his friend's miniature landscapes (bonsan), but his attempt ends in a hilarious disaster.

Noh play

Kokaji

The legendary swordsmith Munetaka forges the emperor's sword with the help of the fox deity of Inari Shrine.

Noh play

Shari

The guardian deity Idate dashes across the heavens to chase the demon Sokushiki who comes to steal Buddha's sacred relics.

Noh play

Kamo

A female deity blesses the world with her graceful dance, and her son, the thunder deity, brings rain and good harvest to the earth.

What are Noh and Kyogen

Noh is a classical Japanese performing art combining poetry, chant, dance, music, costumes, and masks. Developed in the 14th century, it presents stories of deities, spirits, and noble figures through an aesthetics of elegance and restraint. Kyogen, its comic counterpart, portrays everyday situations with humor, while sharing the same historical and aesthetic traditions.

Imagine Noh: Legends and Laughter on Stage
